CHICKASAW COUNTY GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY
Updated: November 7, 2023 by Pam Washington

UPDATE: I used IAGenWeb to find out the Genealogical Society in this county is inactive.
I called the library listed and found out that Jeanette Hendricks has been working to move things forward for this county.

I was able to have a conversation with Jannette Hendricks. She said she is currently the last man standing when it comes to being a member of their genealogical society. It has been inactive for 5-6 years. She indicated they used to have collections at the Library and the Carnegie Cultural Center. Space for this information is limited at both places.
The purpose of her efforts now is to preserve the historical records, documents, family histories, and all sorts of community historical items and information for the local community.

She is aware that IGS considers Chickasaw as having a chapter.

The information IGS would like to display at our website is:
- The name of the genealogical organization (we use the word chapter on our website)
- The address, email address, and phone number.
- Does the chapter have a Facebook page or a website
- Can people become a member? How does that work?
- What hours is the chapter open?
- Do you have meetings and when are they?
- What are some of your top resources for genealogists?

This information is currently not available.
Jannette and I agreed we could stay in contact during the next year. She has my contact information.

From the County Coordinator Contact at IAGenWeb for this county:
Hello, I'm Bruce Kuennen, the County Coordinator for the Chickasaw County IAGenWeb.
I am committed to making Chickasaw County's IAGenWeb site a valuable research tool for people interested in the families of Chickasaw County. If you have information you would like to have posted on the website, or if you would like to volunteer to take cemetery photographs, transcribe obituaries or other records, or help out in any way, please let me know. Volunteers are especially needed for documenting the county's cemeteries. I look forward to hearing from you.
